Introduction

Church registers record baptisms, marriages and burials. These records are different to civil registration of births, deaths and marriages. Church records and civil registration records can co-exist. For example, the birth of a child is registered by the parents and the baptism is recorded by the church.

When civil registration of births, deaths and marriages began in Tasmania on 1 December 1838, the baptism, marriage and burial records of many churches were copied, indexed and included in the Registrar General's records. However some registers were not included, and some were not copied in full. It is therefore useful to search original church registers when civil records of a birth death or marriage can not be found. Because of the risks of mistake or omission in the copying process, the original church registers can sometimes supplement the civil record of the same event.

Tasmanian church registers may be found in a variety of locations. They may be still at the church, they may be held by the Tasmanian Archive and Heritage Office (see below), the Launceston LINC, the Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery Community History Centre (Launceston), the Tasmanian Family History Society (Launceston Branch), the diocese of the church or they may be in private hands. Some have been lost or destroyed.

To find church records for your ancestors you must know their religion and the place where they lived. This will allow you to determine the most likely church. However as people and ministers moved about, records may be found in unexpected places. Remember also that some churches fall within another, for example the Campbell Town Methodist circuit included churches at Tunbridge, Ross, Oatlands, Ellenthorpe, Horton College, Mona Vale, Somercotes and Cleveland.

Launceston LINC

This guide provides a listing of the LINC's holdings.

There are a number of different types of record available

1. Original church registers
2. Microfilm copies or photocopies of original registers
3. Transcripts or indexes of original registers made by somebody else.

(The further you are away from the original the more likely mistakes will occur)

Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery Community History Centre.

A list of records held at the Community History Centre is included in Church registers held in the Tasmanian Archive and Heritage Office, Hobart, TAHO, 2007, page 47. (LSC Indexes Church Registers)

The Tasmanian Archive and Heritage Office

If the records you require are not held at Launceston LINC, then it is possible they may be held at the Tasmanian Archive and Heritage Office, which has an extensive collection. See their publication Church registers held in the Tasmanian Archive and Heritage Office, Hobart, 2007. (LSC Indexes Church Registers) Note that all parish registers held at TAHO are under a 50 year closed access rule. Page 48 contains a list of items acquired since June 2002.

For Catholic Church records later than those available on microfilm, contact the Museum and Archives, Catholic Diocesan Centre, 35 Tower Road, New Town, Tas, 7008, ph 6225 0683.

The Tasmania collection of records 1830's to 1930's cd-rom contains Miscellaneous parish records 1837-1953, compiled from TAHO resources.

PART 2:

Indexes or transcripts of original church registers.

The Harris Church Register Index.

This card index was compiled by Mrs Pat Harris of the Launceston Branch of the Tasmanian Family History Society. It is unique to Launceston LINC. The Index covers baptism, marriage and burial records to 1900 for 16 northern Tasmanian churches. Photocopies of all the registers indexed are held in the Local Studies Collection. Please ask staff for assistance in using this index.

Other Church Register Indexes

If the church you require is not on this list try checking the LINC's library catalogue using the subject key words "church records and registers" and the name of the church or town.
